W. P. WALTON.

FROWENDIENST.

(Francis Earle.) Born in another century, In old, dim years of love and crime and prayer, would have been, no doubt-so lithe and fair—

A stately feudal dame; and I—
And I—your page, perchance I love to dream so of us twain; Your large, clear night-blue eyes had been how sweet
Beneath the tall, white coif! Your dainty

Slow-moving for the heavy train Where scarlet loopards premoel

With folded palms and lids downcast,
A little weary of your queenly life—
You, delicate, a rough Crusader's wife
I dream, in vaulted halls shut fast Though hawthorns are all white.

And I, your page, your thing, your slave,
I bear your house's lilies on my vest,
And love of you deep-hidden ir my breast.
My eyes are calm, my mien is grave;
None dreams the page dare love.

Nay, none on earth! not even you, then, one day—while in the blank, black wall Of your dull room, where sunset shadows

The casement opes a square of blue With veil-like reds slight-

You feel more lonely or more sad, Half-yearning vaguely for some joy un-You speak; I answer not. My lips in stone Feel carved, that yet are laughter-glad,

You are too fair, too whitely fair, In that soft twilight, reeting listessly On your high throne emblazoned duskily! You turn—and gaze—and are aware That Love sits at your feet.

You laugh now at this graceful lie But fit to rhyme away an idle hour; And yet one tithe of truth it hath in dower; I cherish with a page's fealty My lady-service sweet.

THE "LADY CORRESPONDENT."

A Plea in Their Defense-Entitled to Sym pathy, Not Censure. [Cor. Brooklyn Eagle.]

The "lady correspondent" is coming in for a good share of discussion by magazines and essayists just now, and she is being abused in rather a lively way by people who have nothing whatever to do with the press. Among other communications are terest sort of abuse of the female correspondents, and a few dever replies from the correspondents themselves. The female correspondent is a necessity, or she would not exist, and the tirade against her by "society women" and ho'd proprieture amounts to very little in the minds of men who know what the correspondents really are.

I am rather surprised that so little has been said in defense of the female correspondents, for they are paiustaking, hard working and honorable writers—that is, as far as my own experience gees-and in nine cases out of ten are immeasurably above their detractors. I have met many feminine correspondents-in fact, I think I may say that I have met all of any consequence in this country at least—and I have found they are entitled more to sympathy than to censure.

There are two kinds. The timid and ladylike young woman who makes a living, and by no means a good one, by collecting social news, describing the costumes of parvenus and writing up marriages and social enter-tainments, forms one kind. The other kind consists of women who write clever essays and bright letters of travels, etc. It seems particularly hard that such earnest and conscientious writers as the feminine correspondents should come in for abuse, while their sisters, the affected and tiresome "literary women," go scott free. The accusations against the female correspondents seem to be, first, that they expect a $10 bill for describing costumes, and, second, that they beat the proprietors of hotels.

In the first place, it is a society woman's own fault if she scatter her $10 bills among female correspondents, though I do not in the least believe that this is the custom. As for the hotel men, they do not deserve a word one way or another. They must be fine specimens of business men to whine about the influence of a female correspondent and have not gumption enough to manage their own hotels.

Cyrus W. Field's Peculiarities.

Brookly n Union. There is an old story about Mr. Field that he shakes hands with a person according to his wealth or position. If the person occu- $1. All decided on the spur of the moment pies a high rank he will give him his whole hand, and if he is a person in the middle station he will give him three fingers, perhaps, and if a poor and humble citizen, one finger is enough. It is a fact that Mr. Field has a great habit of shaking hands with one good a bargain slip. finger, and he seems to regret allowing that to be used for shaking purposes. A thing that has given him as much reputation as anything else in Wall street is his door-banging propensity. When he enters an office he bangs the door with might and main, and while in gathers his strength to slam it again when he goes out. The door of one office which he frequents, as I am told, required repairing from his banging four times within

Most people have an idea that Mr. Field is a Crosu. He is not an extremely wealthy man for a Wall street figure. On paper Jay Gould is worth from $60,000,000 to $75,000, 000, and Russell Sage from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000. The best estimates put Mr. Field's wealth at about $3,000,000, and that average person, no doubt, thinks Mr. Field as wealthy as Mr. Sage, and some think be his sincere and earnest piety, as he was in is almost as wealthy as Mr. Gould. The the old times for daring and reckless courtruth is, Mr. Field is rather a pretentious age. man, and his airs, perhaps, have created an idea of great wealth. He is not an operator on Wall street in the sense that Gould is at all. Gould is a scalper of the market—that is, he will push stocks up or down, as the Mexico writes: "The bird that had swooned case may be, to get two or three points was bathed with cold water, its throat profit. Field always goes in for long deals moistened by a wet feather, a cloth held like the Manhattan. He may go short of stock and work months and months to hammer it down with the intention of buying at its comb. Thus stimulated, it resumed the the bottom for a long reaction.

GARRARD COUNTY DEPARTMENT.

Lancaster.

-Rev. W. O. Goodloe will begin a protracted meeting at the Presbyterian church Tuesday evening.

-Rav. Stevenson, of Lower Garrard, occupied the pulpit at the Christian church Sunday morning and evening.

-Mr. James Logan, sged about 60 years. died at his home in this county Sunday morning. Deceased was an uncle of Mr. John Logan of this place.

-The military company is a dear thing of the near future. About 40 voung men have signed the muster roll, which will be sent to the Adjutant General in few days.

-Mr. Jack Hiatt and a cornstalk measuring fourteen feet in height came into town Saturday. Mr. H. carried two large ears of corn which he avers came from off the stalk.

-The young gentlemen composing the Dancing Club will give an impromptu hop at the hall Thursday evening next. Valunt's orchestra from Louisville will furnish music for the occasion.

-David McGinnis, who was sent to the work house for a term of 35 days for carrying concealed weapons, made good his escape Friday evening after having served only two days of his sentence.

-Some unknown person stole a fine mare valued at $150 from James H. West, who lives near Histaville, in this county on last Saturday night. A diligent search for the missing animal has been unsuccessful thus far.

-The Star of Cheyenne, a highly educated Indian, delivered a free lecture on the Indian question at the Court-house Saturday evening. This (Monday) evening an admission fee will be demanded and a variety of subjects pertaining to Indian life will be treated.

-Doctor and Mrs. W. S. O'Neal went to Verona Friday. Miss Bertie Collier has returned from an extended visit to friends in Carlisle and other points. John K. Faulker, Jr., and Sam M. Duncan have returned from Louisville. Mr. W. H. Wherritt, Miss Kate Wherritt and Mr. Victor Wherritt leave Tuesday to attend the Wherritt-Bailey nuptials at Versailles Wednesday, Mr. and Mrs. Robt, H. Young, of Midway, are at Dr. Huffman's. Mr. James C. Hemphill is in Cincinnati on business. Mr. Gill Cooper, of Stanford, was in the cify Sunday.

-On last Wednesday morning Mr. Mike Ray, the proprietor of a hotel at this place, left his home for Crab Orchard on horseback. Thursday morning his dead body his death was the result of the excessive use of whicky. This is considered by the people here who knew Mr. Ray well as very unjust as it is well known that he rarely ever touched intoxicants in any form. His family physician pronounced his death as resulting from an appoplectic stroke, an attack of which the deceased gentleman had on a former occasion experienced. His remains were brought here eye Friday and interred.

Trying a Confidence Game.

[New York Letter.] Secretary of the Navy Whitney is an old New Yorker, and therefore familiar with the city's characteristics. He stood in the corridor of the Fifth Avenue hotel in social talk with the Secretary of the Interior Lamar, and the topic of conversation was a confidence robbery that had been perpetrated upon a guest of the house that day. Whitney maintained that while some men were astonishingly gullible, the majority were unreasonably cautious.

"To illustrate my point," he said, "let my young friend, Joe Barnard, here, offer to give a $10 bal for $1, and not a man in this corridor will accept the offer."

The experiment was at once made. Joe was a good-looking, well-dressed fellow, with nothing in his aspect to suggest roguery. Whitney handed a crisp, new $10 note to him, and he set out on his round. "I beg your pardon, sir," remarked Joe, politely, to the veteran Gen. Dan Sickles, who was stumping round on a leg and a crutch, "but will you please give me $1 for this $10?" and he held the note so close to Sickles' eyes that its genuineness ought to have been visible. A half-sarcastic, halfangry grin came over the general's face, but he deigned no reply; and contemptuously turned away. The proffer was soberly made to nine men, none being a witness of the other's refusal, and every time with the All decided on the spur of the moment that they were the objects of a swindler's attention. The endangered note came safely back to Whitney, and the group laughed over the adventure—save Sickles, who was called in to be teased for letting so

Bishops on Gen. Buckner's Staff.

[St. Louis Republican.] Gen. S. B. Buckner, one of the two Con. federate pall-bearers for Gen. Grant, had remarkable staff during the war, and his military family has furnished the Episcopal church with three bishops-Gallagher, of Kentucky, who was a lieutenant colonel and assistant adjutant general, is now bishop of Louisiana; Elliot, another Kentuckian, captain and aid-de-camp, is bishop of Texas; Harris, of Georgia, aid-de-camp, who is a bishop of the Mexican diocese, was first promoted to this high dignity in the church. Another clergy man who came from the same strange training-school is Shoup, a West Point is in all probability the extent of it. The graduate, who left the old army and went south. He is now a D. D., and famed for

Stimulating a Swooned Bird.

[Exchange.] An American who saw a cock-fight in Fresh Water on Ships.

Voyages in ships fitted with distilling apparatus are assured against privations from thirst, but it is still desirable to discover some means of making sea water potable by simpler means. A ship's boat can scarcely be fitted with the requisite appararatus, although even that should not be impossible. Chemistry should, however, be equal to the task of eliminating or neutralizing the salt in the water and to Mr. Thomas Kay, president of the Stockport Natural History Society, is due the merit of making search for the solution of the problem. He proposes to remove the chlorides from sea water by the agency of citrate of silver. The process is based on the bill of ! ealth, we modestly unfurl our banfact that when a soluble silver salt and a soluble chloride are mixed chloride of silver separates and falls as a white, curdy precipitate, which is quite insoluble. This chloride of silver is familiarly known as horn silver. The citrate of silver gives up its acid to the sods and other alkalis in the sea water, so that what remains is a solution of citrate of soda chiefly. This salt is said to be not only harmless but beneficial. The quantity of citrate of silver required is two onnces for every pint of sea water. Mr. Kay proposes that bottles of the citrite of silver should be secured in the life boats of ships and used when absolutely required so that the lament of "water, water everywhere, and not a drop to drink," may no longer be heard. There is nothing in the description to suggest a doubt of the usefulness of the discovery. The expense of supplying the citrate of silver is an objection unworthy of consideration.

HUSTONVILLE, LINCOLN COUNTY.

-The continuous rains of last week have restored to us the luxury of clean water, of which we had long been destitute.

-Rev. James A. Allen, who supplies the Presbyterian pulpit in this place, has failed to meet his last two appointments, being reported seriously sick at Chattanooga.

-Winter set in on Sunday in this latitude Hence a lively demand for blankets, especially among old bachelors. Of this neglected elass we have only about a dozen in town, and will probably be able to keep them from suffering.

-In the rivalry prevailing among the small towns to secure the medal for a clean ner and claim for Hustonville the first prize for health, temperance, industry and piety, as she has long borne it for good looks and exuberant fecundity.

-Chris Lyon left a pumpkin in town, the equatorial circumferance of which is 54 inches, the polar 56 inches and weight 68 lbs. John Goode has on exhibition a lot of corn, each ear of which is such a monster that I dare not state its dimensions. It is anxious to be beaten.

-Thompsie Cooper, late of Cooper & Ryan, has struck out canvassing in the interest of a large clothing house. He is one of the cleverest, most reliable gentlemen that ever graced that flonrishing profession or tapped the "drum commercial" to the delectation of a village audience. We bespeak for him a cordial welcome and a cheering trade.

-Miss Kate Powell, who has been sick some weeks, is reported as about holding ber own. Dave Newbern left his family in the market for horses and mules dull.

W. P. WALTON.

IT is strange but nevertheless true that when a man sells his birthright for a mess of potage, or rather a little temporary government position, he feels it his bounden duty to champion the cause of every difty renegade, even at the expense of the truth. Taking as his text the baseless charge that we had commended Dr. Temple's attack on John S. Wise for his denunciation of the Danville people, and ridiculed the latter because he did not fight, the editor of the Somerset Republican makes an allusion to us which is as false as it is ungentlemanly. In regard to the Wise matter we merely stated the facts in the case, adding only that he did not make his usual attack on the Danville people after the affair. The question of our personal bravery is one that we never discuss, in fact we make no claim to any, but while we never provoke a row if possible to prevent it, no man can truthfully say that we ever shirked the responsibility of one, if nothing else would do our antagonist. We have no idea to whom he refers and do not believe he has either, but if he actually thinks such a circumstance occurred and believes that it black negro to Cincinnati, to be married. can be repeated with impunity, he has only to expose the most prominent portion of his anatomy in our reach to see how quickly the toe of our boot will come in contact with it, though we should dislike to hurt the "amoosin' little cuss."

A FEW years ago Ambler Smith, a rip roaring republican, was elected to Congress from the Richmond, Va., district. John Wise was then a dyed in the wool democrat. Now he is the meanest of republicans, a proselyte, and Smith has forsaken the g. o. p. and joined the democrats. The two worthies met on a railroad train the other day and the latter having given the former "the lie" the former very promptly knocked the latter down. Smith wanted to wipe the insult out with blood but Wise has renounced the code and he can only seek revenge in denouncing him as a poltroon and a coward. Those Virginia politicians are a queer set.

WHEN Nellie Grant Sartoris was summoned from across the deep to attend the of wonder why her English husband did not accompany her. It is now stated that five captains. they do not live happily together. In fact so brutal is his treatment of her that she would have separated from him long ago, but from her inability to obtain possession of her three children. The marriage was the regret of Gen. Grant's life and gave is contemplated by Mrs. Sartoris.

ITEMS like this from the Owensboro Mes senger are appearing all over the State: "There is a good deal of talk of Judge Durham for Governor. We do not believe Judge Darham cares to leave his present position in Washington, where he has made more reputation than any other officer connected with the administration, and return to Kentucky to engage in a doubtful contest. He is just the kind of man needed at Frankfort just now, however-one who would kill the little rings about the capital, and inaugurate some long needed reforms.

HARTNET, the Cincinnati fiend who carved his weakly wife to death, was permitted to view the sunset the evening before his execution last week. He looked long and silently upon a scene never more to be viewed by him on earth, when finally he broke the stillness by remarking "When that goes down again I will be flying about among the little angels." As his head was jerked off by the rope when the drop was sprung, he will create consternation among "the little angels" who will hardly know what to think of a headless cherub.

THE average advertising agent is a thief. who makes his money by swindling news paper proprietors. We have never had a great deal of experience with them, but what we have has convinced us that a decent paper should ignore them altogether. Consequently we have resolved to have no more dealings with them whatever, except at regular rates, spot cash. If every paper in the State would do likewise and live up to it, we should soon be rid of these leeches, besides get fully as much work at remunerative figures.

THOSE excellent Owensboro papers, the Messenger and the Inquirer, are experiencing a well desevred boom. They have each enlarged to nine columns to the page and their advertising patronage is so great that even now it encroaches on their reading matter, notwithstanding they issue three times a week. No better evidence of the growth and prosperity of Owensboro could be adduced than is so abundantly reflected in her newspapers.

NAPOLEON III IN AMERICA

His Admiration of American Genius-How a Fortune Was Created. [Houssaye's Confessions.]

Napoleon III admired American genius because it is creative genius; he grew indignant over French character that humiliates itself more and more in order that a man may become a state official, whether a minister or a stone-breaker on the highways. Turing toward King Jerome and Prince Murat, he said: "I am sure you are not come to Saint Cloud this morning solely to drink Suresnes wine; you must have, as usual, your pockets filled with requests—one for a decoration, one for a license to sell tobacco, one fo: a senatorship. What a pity! Why do not those people make a for tune?-that is true liberty-instead of striving to enter the service of the state and spend their lives in slavery.

"Americans grafted upon Englishmen are real freemen; they are the masters of the universe because they are their own masters. For example, when I was in New York I dined at a table d'hote beside a poor devil who had no shirt to his back, but who fascinated me by the daring of his schemes. It was extravagant, but sublime. That high-toned, penniless fellow, who, in France would have died a tax collector or a quilldriver in an administrative department possessed, one year later, $12,000,000 in cash. And he had not stolen the money, either. One day he was an hour late at the table d'hote, so he said to us by way of apology: You see, I have made a fortune.'

"As we looked at him rather dubiously, for he had not yet bought a shirt, he spread upon the table a roll of paper upon which he had drawn the plan of a city of 20,000 inhabitants with churches, fountains, squares, and monuments—a stock exchange not being forgotten, of course. All this was fairylike, but reasoned out to perfection; it was a real city of the future, such as we shall have some day in France. Myman had not confined himself to designing the town, but had purchased the ground on which to build, and made his contracts with masons and gardeners. They were about to lay the foundations and make the streets. 'And you city will rise like Thebes, when Amphion played upon the lyre.' 'Yes, and they will not build, as in Europe, one house at a time; all will be commenced on the same day, and completed at the same

And, after a pause, "what I tell you now," continued Napolean III, sounds like a tale, but our feilow-diner was in earnest; he had secured the refusal of the site, and shown the contracts to bankers, who perceived that there was a fortune in the affair for themselves as well as for him; all of them took the bit in their teeth, and state. On that day I promised myself that on my return to Paris-a thing I never doubted-I should rebuild the capital, and this I shall do, with God's help."

Heavy Draughts.

[The Argonaut.] An eminent English physician, on oath, the other day, said that he had known men who took their sixty tumblers of punch per day, fand seemed no whit the worse for the indulgence. The twenty-one-tumbler man is, or used to be, a common product of Irish and Scotch conviviality. Boswell was up to that. So was John Philpot Curran, and Erskine, on occasion, compassed his two dozen hot toddies. Then there was a good old soul, who died a few weeks ago in the Rue Vivienne, in Paris, in the house where Mr. P. Egan for some time established the flying exchequer of the Land League. This celebrity was a retire! shipping agent from Marseilles, and the daily draught in which he did penance comprised four bottles of Burgundy, four of claret, and two of champage--this allowance being exclusive of the "petits verres" and occasional drinks.

A Suicidal Tendency.

If there is a suicidal tendency in a man it is apt to develop soon after marriage, when he first discovers the pearly little teeth of his sleeping darling drowning themselves in a tumbler on her dressing table.

LIFE SAVED BY FLOATING.

A Lady Who Had Enough Presence of Mind to Follow Good Advice.

[Washington Star.] To Persons About to Drown.—Retain your presence of mind as if you were in your own parlor. Throw yourself promptly on your back. Cease to struggle. Simply keep your nose out of the water and breathe through your nose, and you will float, and presently some one will come and pull you

The above is good advice. Probably the most remarkable instance of a life saved by observing this advice occurred at Parramore's beach, Accomac county, Virginia. This beach is one of the outlying chain of islands running down the coast of the eastern shore of that state, and form the true seashore of their eastern sides. Between them and the main are shallow broad waters, as they are called, and marshes that are covered at high water, and both intersected by channels, which are the thoroufares of communication. Three years ago this summer some ladies were visiting friends in Drummondtown, and a beach party was got up in their honor. Four of the ladies separated from the party to get a surf bath, and for that purpose chose a remote part of the island to be secure from observation.

One lady remained in longer than the rost, and in changing her position stepped into a deep place, lost her footing and was carried off. As soon as this was observed, the others ran off screaming for help across the island, a difficult locomotion owing to the presence of sharp grass and yielding sand, a distance, perhaps, of a quarter of a mile, to a fish factory, where a number of experienced fishermen and sailors were engaged. The first one of the ladies who reached the station was so exhausted that she fell prone in the sand, and some minutes elapsed before she could make the situation known. When she did, all the men declined to make the search, and said it was extremely dangerous, and moreover there was no use to try it, as the lady was undoubtedly drowned and they would look for and secure her body on the return of the

While the women were beseeching and wringing their hands in agony, two young fishermen came up, and, finding out the situation, jumped in a boat, pulled out the inlet between F_rramore's and the island just north of it, down outside the surf line, and about sundown discovered the object of their search floating on the water, a mile and a half from the place of and an hour and a half after the accident. They took her aboard, thence to the main, where she was put to bed and given an alcoholic stimulant. Two days after she was in Washington alive and well. In giving her experience afterward she said that as soon as she found she had lost her footing she cried out and threw herself upon her back and floated, an accomplish-ment she had learned in a Brooklyn swimming school. She wore a broad-brimmed hat, which, tied under the chin, encumbered her much, but she said she was afraid to raise her hands to unfasten it lest she should sink. This saved her life, as it was the object that the fisherman first spied. Had she been able to swim, in all probability that would have been her first endeavor and exhaustion and drowning would have followed and this true tale never been told Novel Methods of Advertising.

[Baltimore American.] What a science the art of advertising has become, and how many millionaires owe their wealth to the judicious use of printers' ink and space in the columns of influenties daily papers. The proprietors of patented medicines were the first to take advantage of the publicity given to their advertise ments, and the vast estates left by them to their heirs were accumulated mainly through the aid of the press. Bonner, of The New York Ledger, piled up his fortune by the increase in circulation obtained by publishing the opening chapters of every new story in papers all over the country, closing at an interesting crisis, with the information that the rest could-only be read in the columns of The New York Ladger. The story is told that Col. Taylor Suit, of Maryland, at one time inserted an advertisement covering a whole page in The New York Herald of his patent blended whisky, and bought 100,000 copies of the paper. Getting possession of the papers, he had them run through other presses, and, when he mailed them, there was printed in flaming red letters above "The New York Herald" the legend, "Read My Advertisement of Blended Whisky on the Seventh Page." This was in the time of the elder Bennett, and he was indignant at the trick. The cutest thing in the way of a railroad advertisement was engineered by Capt. May, of the Pennsylvania railroad. When Jules Verne's story of "Around the World in Eighty Days" was published in France, a Philadelphia paper had it transfated, and printed the story in installment. In that portion where the author describes his railroad trip from San Francisco to New York, Capt. May had inserted an original chapter specially devoted to the praise of the cars and track of the Pennsylvania railroad, and highly complimenting the "undersigned," as he was accustomed to say when speaking of himself, for accelerating the progress of the party toward New York.

Judge Hoar's First Meeting with Grant.

[Concord Memerial Address.] I am reminded of the first time that I ever saw him, which was just twenty years ago, when the first great division of the work of his life had been completed. It was in the heat of the summer following the close of the civil war, when he came on to New England for a little rest after his immense labors, and I was introduced to him. Lee had surrendered. Richmond had been taken, Gen. Grant had instantly gone to Washington and taken measures as rapidly as possible to dissolve and send bome the army of the Potomac, to restore them to their natural places in the country.

I said to him: "Gen. Grant, I have been looking in the papers pretty steadily since the fall of Richmond and the surrender of Lee to see about your entering the city before which you had been kept for so long a time, and I have not yet seen that occurrence reported in any newspaper." Gen. Grant replied: "I never was in Richmond in my life. I think we have known some generals, and even some military men of less exalted rank than generals, who would not have been likely to have had such an answer to make; whom we should have seen riding about the streets of Richmond on prancing steeds, with brass brands and the thunder of cannon; who would have issued a proclamation, had they accomplished very much less than what Gen. Grant hal done. tender forbearance on his part is an act which the heart of Virginia should remem-

A FEW HISTORICAL REMARKS UPON THESE EVERYDAY TITLES.

MR., MRS. AND MISS.

How, in Early Times, Plain John Smith Became "Maistre" and His Wife "Maistress" - Corruption of the Once Honored Term.

[Home Journal.]

Not only in our country, but apparently with all modern peoples, the habit has arisen and become a permanent and every day custom of appropriating what were form-erly definite titles of high distinction, and making them absolutely meaningless by them to the name of every obscure tacking individual. Does not, for instance, every German butcher and baker expect to be dubbed "herr" or "lord?" It is the same, too, both with the "monsieur" of the French man, and the "signor" and the "senor" of the Italian and Spaniard. In actual conversation we are less assuming than our neighbors, and do not require to be spoken of as Esquire Smith or Lord Jones, being quite contented with a plain "Mister" before our names; but we are quite apt to feel slighted and offended if the "Esq." should be omitted after our names on the envelopes which contain our correspond The history of those everyday titles of Mr. and Mrs., which are now the common property of every one, or, at any rate, seem to be supposed to be so, is not without interest, though in some of its steps it is a little obscure, and a few remarks upon it may not be out of place

In the earlier times of our history the ordinary man was simply William or John; that is to say, he had merely a Christian name, without any kind of "handle" before it or surname after it. Into the question of surnames we do not propose to enter here. Suffice it to say that as some further means of distinguishing one John or one William from another John or another William were found, in process of time to be necessary, names, generally nicknames, derived from a man's trade, or from his dwelling-place, or from some personal pe-culiarity, were tacked on to their Christian names, and plain John became John Smith. As yet there were no "Misters" in the land.

Some John Smith accumulated more wealth than the bulk of his lows—became, perhaps a landed pro-prietor, or an employer of hired labor. Then he began to be called in the Norman-French of the day, the "Masstre" of this place or of that, of these workmen or of those. In time the "Maistre," or "Maister," as it soon became, got tacked on before his name, and he became Maister Smith, and his wife was Maistress Smith. But it was only persons who had a notable position in a place, and who actually were masters" or something or other beyond the ordinary domestic chattles, who were thus dignified with the title. Gradually the sense of possession was lost sight of, and the title was conferred upon any man who had attained social distinction of any kind, whether by wealth, or by holding some position of more or less consideration and im portanca.

For a long series of years, however, no one was called "Maister," or "Master" (into which "Maister" got transformed), unless be was distinctly in a position superior to that of the great bulk of his fellow-countrymen, and was really, in one sense or another, a "master," and it is only within compartively modern times that the term came to be considered an almost indispensable adjunct to one's name when mentioned in ordinary conversation or writing. Maistress Smitt soon became Mistress Smith. Exactly how and when the term got corrupted can not be said. Master Smith, however, remained Master Smith long after his wife became trace. It is certain, however, that it is a use of by no means long standing. The contraction "Mr." appears on the title-page of the first folio edition of Shakespeare, but it would probably have have been read as "Master" at the time of its publication. It is likely, indeed, that it was not till long after. Shakespeare's day that the influence of the Office on 4th St., - - Danville, Ky corresponding for of mistress was able to turn the a of the old-fashioned "Master into i of the "Mister" of our own times, though we still retain the old word for the service of our children, and to-day Master Smith is no longer the head of the house hold, but his little son.

We find an example of the old use of the word still surviving in England in the masters of the supreme court, officials ranking immediately below her majesty's judges, and it is occasionally amusing to a stranger to hear a grave and gray-hairefold gentleman referred to as Master Jone . A somawhat similar instance is still to be found in France, where the title usually given advocates and notaries is "Maitre."

Not only, however, was John Smith's wife known as Mistress Smith, but his grown up, unmarried daughters were equally called Mistress, with the addition of their Christian names, for distinction's sake, if such were necessary. Nor did this use of Mistress give place to our modern form of "Miss" till after the lapse of a considerable portion of the last century. The word "Miss" was certainly used before that time, but not, indeed, very long before. At the beginning of the last century it was appropriated to the daughters of gentlemen under the age of 10, or given slightly to giddy young ladies, or to those to whom we should apply the modern term of "fast."

It is only within moderately recent times that it has become the property of unmarried ladies, whatever be their age. As to the derivation of the word "Miss," it seems clear that it is not obtained by curtailing "Mistress" of its last syllable, but rather to have arisen from the custom of abbreviating that word into Miss. Probably, too, our modern Missis or Mrs. is to be accounted for by an attempt to give a definite sound to this abbreviated form. At any rate the prosent writer is unable, after considerable avestigation of the matter, to offer any other suggestion, or to discover that any other one has been offered by any Chinese Immigrants.

[Exchange.] "From what part of China do the immigrants come!" was asked of ex-Minister Young in Penver.

"From Hong Kong and Canton entirely. The former city is on an island about seven hours' travel from Canton, and the Chinese, or coolies, as they are, go down the river to Hong Kong, from which place they come to America. Hong Kong is a city of about 150,000 Chinese and 3,000 English, besides Americans, French, and Germans, but among the foreigners the English largely predominate, from the fact, I suppose, that it is English territory. This has always been the sticking point in treating on the question of Chinese immigration to this country. It is a matter entirely out of the hands of the Chinese government, as all the emigrants sail from British territory. I never heard of one coming to America from any other place?" any other place."

Col. A. H. Markland says he never knew Gen. Grant to whisper or speak in low tones, as if unwilling that all present should hear.

A FRIGHTFUL CASE

Of a Colored Man.

I contracted a fearful case of blood poison in 1838. I was treated by some of the best physicians in Atlanta. They used the oid remedies of mercury and potash, which brought on rheumatism and impaired my digestive organs. Every joint in me was swolien and full of oain. I was in a horrible condition. When I had been given up to die, my physicians, who had seen the workings of the medicine in other cases, thought it would be a spiendid time to test the virtues of Swift's Specific. When I commenced taking S. S. the physician said I could not live two weeks under ordinary treatment. He commenced to give me the medicine strictly according to directions, which I continued for several months. I took nothing else and commenced to improve frem the first. Occasionally I would have a backset from imprudence. Soon the rheumatism left me, my appetite became all right, and the uncers, which the doctor said was the most frightful he had ever seen, be, an to heal, and by the first of October, 1884, I was a well man again. I am stronger now than I ever was before, and weigh more. I have not failed to report for duty since that time, being engaged in the oil warehouse of Chess-Carley Company. I have been, and still am, doing some of the hardest work any man ever did, and am ready to answer any question that may be asked concerning the case, swift s Specific has saved me from an early grave.

LEM McClendon has been in the employ of the lem McClendon has been in the employ of the land.

Lem McClendon has been in the employ of the Chess-Carley Company for some years and I know the above statements to be true. At the time he began taking Swift's Specific he was in a horrible condition, and at my solicitation his treatment with S. S. S. was undertaken by a physician after the statement with S. S. S. was undertaken by a physician after these back has been his care to be heaveless.

CAUTION.

Consumers should not confuse our Specific with the numerous imitations, substitutes, Potash and Mercury mixtures, which are gotten up to sell, not on their own merit, bu, on the merit of sur remedy. Any imitation is always a fraud and a cheat and they thrive only as they can steal from the article imitated.

Wm. Warthens,

James Warthens,

We are to-day the only Boot and Shoe manufacturers in the United States tanning our own stock and adhering to the Old Fashioned Long-time Cold-Liquor Process of making Leather, by which method alone can soft and pliant Leather be made. Of course any 30 or 60-day method, as now practiced in order to make leather cheap, must destroy its life; and when the oil used in softening it evaporates, it naturally becomes dry, hard and brittle. We live in a progressive age and practical people are steering clear of cheap, trashy goods, and to all such we extend a cordial invitation to try the Buell Boots and Shoes. Respectfully, BUELL & SON, Waterville, N. Y.
